SF Legal Technology Enables Early Case Assessment and Analysis, Saving Client 45% on Review Costs

Need to do an early case review? Want transparency into large amounts of data? SF Legal can empower you with technology that will get you ready to roll in record time. Try our Early Case Assessment Platform and you'll agree there's just no comparison between this new technology and traditional methods of data filtering.

Recently, a global technology client sent us four gigabytes of data to load into Clearwell, our Early Case Assessment tool. The client was so impressed with how quickly they could narrow and filter the population for relevant data that they decided to really put us to the test.

A week later on a Friday night, long after other service providers had left for the weekend, the client sent us 30 gigabytes of data. In five hours, we had 300,000 files loaded into Clearwell and ready for their review.

Of that total population of 300,000 records, a mere 15 percent were exported from Clearwell for a more granular review in their internal summation database. And of those 46,000 items, only 20,000 files were exported for TIFFing and production. With so much less data, the client finished their review in just a few days instead of a week. And, in addition to lower review costs, they saved a considerable amount on processing costs as well.
